

High Halstow Village Hall

Murder Mystery

HE'S DONE IT AGAIN!! No he wasn't the murderer but was the architect of another great two nights in the Village Hall. Yes it was Mick Woolmington with his third Murder Mystery. Along with building a great set (assisted by Ray Collins) Mick set this murder in The Pink Heron Club in the Caribbean.

The cast of Dramarama performed it well providing clues and red herrings on the way. Whilst the audience worked their way through the clues they were treated to once again a three-course meal superbly organised by Jo Mitchell, Wenda Taylor and Michelle King.

Thanks to Hilda Woolmington for the sound and for assisting Mick with this show, finding all the pink items for the set, which helped set the scene so well. I know Mick worries about the shows for months beforehand but had no need as all were very well entertained and some even worked out who the murderer was Just under £1,000 was raised for the hall and many thanks to all who came along to support these shows and thanks to for all of the people who make this happen, it really is a team effort and without all of the support the event would not work.
